Magellan Hill Names Joseph Ambersley to Board of Directors

HADDONFIELD, N.J. – Magellan Hill Technologies, a telecommunications management and consulting company based in Haddonfield, N.J., has named Joseph Ambersley to a three-year term on its board of directors.

Ambersley, who lives in St. Augustine, Fla., is the chairman of Washington, D.C.-based COMPTEL, the largest telecommunications industry trade association in the United States. Prior to serving as chairman, Ambersley served as vice chairman/treasurer for five years.

“Joseph Ambersley has been a guiding force in telecommunications for three decades and we will put his wealth of experiences to good use as Magellan Hill continues to grow,” Bono said. “With Joe’s input, the future of Magellan Hill appears brighter than ever.”

Ambersley has 30 years experience in the telecommunications industry and is one of the founders of PAETEC Communications, which he joined in 1998 as executive vice president. He was appointed vice president of business development in April 2000 and, in September 2002, he was given the responsibility of national strategic markets and took over the South Region as president.

Prior to joining PAETEC, Ambersley served as vice president, carrier services with National Telecommunications of Florida and also helped form the Associated Communications Companies of America nonprofit trade association in 1993.

Magellan Hill CEO Brad Bono said Ambersley’s experiences in the telecommunications industry will help the company continue its growth in a changing environment.
