Magellan Hill Named to Philadelphia Business Journal's S.J. 25

HADDONFIELD, N.J. – Telecommunications management and consulting company Magellan Hill Technologies, LLC, announced that it was named to the Philadelphia Business Journal's 2011 South Jersey 25 -- a list of the area's fastest-growing private companies.

Magellan Hill placed eighth on the list thanks to a three-year (2008-2010) revenue growth rate of 125 percent. The company also has grown from nine to 15 employees in that period. To qualify for the list, which was vetted and ranked by Rowan University's William G. Rohrer College of Business, companies were required to have increased revenue over the past three fiscal years with year one revenues of at least $75,000.

Founder and CEO Brad Bono said the ranking on the newspaper's list is affirmation that Magellan Hill is carving an important and growing niche in the region.

"We expect this is the first of many appearances on the Philadelphia Business Journal's list," Bono said. "Given our recent expansion into northern New Jersey and a growing stable of clients, we're confident that exciting times are ahead for Magellan Hill."

Earlier this year, Comm-Link, Inc, a northern New Jersey-based telecomm provider, joined forces with Magellan Hill, opening a new office in April at 700 Godwin Ave., Suite 330, in Midland Park. In addition, Magellan Hill closed an expanded revolving credit facility of $1 million with The Bank. The facility is being used for general corporate purposes, including the offering of new products.
